Dear Judge Cedarbaum,

This letter is written on behalf of Mr. Paul Greenwood. I have been a hair stylist for 50 consecutive years. Twenty three years ago, I was introduced to Paul at the hair salon where I worked in White Plains. He became a steady client along with his wife to be, Robin.

Not long after our introduction, my dad became ill. Although hair dressers hear a fair share life's circumstances from their customers, it was Paul's conciliatory wisdom and support that truly impacted my life. I was encouraged to step up and be a caregiver for dad while also guiding my mom through this difficult period. From then on, our friendship grew. I have been a family friend since then with the Greenwoods. I truly felt like a family member when Paul and Robin adopted their two daughters.

Back in 2002 I discovered a problem within the walls of my bathroom. I was suspicious of a mold type odor but could not get any assistance from my building management company. The situation became apparent when the mirror slipped away from the wall due to a very damp condition caused by a waste water leak. For another six months I patiently waited for management and the condo board to take action to resolve the problem. Things only began to get resolved after discussing my dilemma with Paul. Once again, he had the right advice for me. He insisted that I get an independent laboratory test for contaminants. The results revealed high levels of toxic mold. He insisted that I vacate my premises immediately. Paul and his wife Robin offered me a place to stay in their home during the remediation and reconstruction project. I opted to live temporarily in a nearby hotel and continue to take corrective action for my personal health and overall well being. My stay at the hotel was unexpectedly extended due to the abundance of mold discovered in a number of locations in my apartment. Paul gave me financial assistance so that I could continue to remain at my temporary residence and secure a lawyer. He was kind and generous while also being strong and supportive. Paul was there for me when I had nowhere to turn. Eventually, all the issues were resolved and I am very grateful for Paul's intervention on my behalf.

Before Paul relocated to North Carolina, he worked passionately as a volunteer who councils American War Veterans and assisted them with transitioning back to our society and culture. I am confident that Paul has been a positive influence in their life as he was for me.

Thank you. Respectfully,

Rosemary DeAngelis

RE: Paul Greenwood

Hon. Miriam Goldman Cedaraum
United States District Court

Dear Judge Cedarbaum:

I would like to take this opportunity to comment on the character of Paul Greenwood. I believe as a judge you are extremely busy and appreciate that you would read this letter.

I understand that Paul Greenwood has pleaded guilty, but I would like to give you some insight as to how he has helped my family.

My name is Shari Tricarico and I currently live in Puyallup, Washington. I lived in New York for 26 years. I am currently contemplating retirement.

I met Paul Greenwood and his wife Robin, when my daughter started babysitting their first child in the nineties. Their children often visited our home when my daughter babysat for them. When Paul came to pick them up his daughters, they were delighted to see him. Watching Paul with his children, you could tell that he was a good father.

At the time I was a single mother of five children with no financial support from my previous husband. Paul was always very kind to my family. When my daughter graduated from high school, Paul and his family attended the ceremony. During the award ceremony my daughter received a small monetary award because of financial need. Paul and Robin offered to help her with her college expenses from the fall of 1998 to the spring of 2000.

When my youngest son was beginning his junior year of high school, our landlord wanted to sell the house that we had been leasing for the prior fifteen years. He wanted to immediately evict us if we had no desire to purchase the house ourselves. When Paul heard of our situation he found a lawyer who would work for us for free and made it possible for us to have some time to look for a suitable alternative. We were unable to find another affordable home in the same school district, so Paul allowed us to live in a home that he owned that was in my son's school district. Paul also generously allowed me to lease the home for the same rent I was previously paying. In the end, my son was able to finish his high school education in the same school system that he had spent his entire childhood in. This was between 2001 to 2004.

I have worked hard to bring up my children to be responsible, contributing adults (which they have all become). The world is not often kind to single mothers, and sometimes people need some additional help beyond their own abilities. Paul was there to help my family and I when we needed it the most. He has always treated me with dignity and respect. I feel that the service and help he has provided to me was truly heaven-sent.

I am grateful to Paul for the guidance and assistance he gave our family. He is a good man.

Thank you for your time and consideration of my letter.

Respectfully,

Shari Tricarico

Dear Judge Cedarbaum:

My name is Marilene Pereira, I work as a parent educator in a non-profit organization in Connecticut. I have the pleasure to write this letter in regards to the character of Paul Greenwood. I worked as a housekeeper in the Greenwood residence for a significant amount of time. I was there everyday from early morning to late in the afternoon, including weekends when needed. Paul always showed a very generous heart taking great care of his family. I have lived through many experiences with the Greenwood family. The size of his generosity cannot be merrily described in a letter.

While working for Paul and his family I faced many challenges in my personal life. I lost both my parents within a short period of time of each other. And even though they had the necessity of my presence to clean the house and care for the children both he and his wife were selfless in giving me the time to grieve. He financially and emotionally assisted me during this hard part of my life in order to help me recompose and get over this occurrence.

Not much time after the loss of my parents I had the challenge of my only daughter's health conditions in the middle of 2007. I had tried to keep this part of my personal life hidden from Paul and his family in order to not overwhelm them. Because of the many years of service at their home and the treatment I received as family instead of just a worker the change in my state of being was perceived by the family. Paul promoted an environment at work that allowed me to feel comfortable in sharing the health concerns I had about my daughter. Soon after sharing the problems I was being faced with at home Paul approached me and notified me that he spoke to his wife and they both agreed to help me with the heath phase that I was having to face. They offered all the emotional support by allowing me time off of work to discuss with doctors what was occuring with my daughter. They also offered financial support I would need to pay no matter the doctor or office my daughter would have to visit.

Paul comforted me with words that I still recall to this day. He said to me with tears in his eyes "Marilene, I have children of my own and I know how much you love your daughter. And [redacted] means as much to us as she does to you. Robin and I consider her to be a child of ours as well, just as you are family to us so is she. Anything we can do to help you and her we will do, without reserve."

When I was considering what to say in this letter I took a moment to ask my daughter if I asked her about Paul Greenwood what would she tell me? She reminded me of the Christmas gift she had received from Paul and Robin, one of the first years I had began working for them. To this day she still recalls the large pile of gifts she received in bright wrapping papers and ribbons that Robin had put together herself. She brought to light the generosity of the gifts he and his wife had put together, looking back now months from becoming adult she realizes that what he did was exciting for her as a child but in summation simply reveals the generous heart Paul had for anyone.

To conclude this letter I would like to leave you with a final thought, - a metaphor, if I may, in the simplistic manner of a housekeep. I receive many guests at my house and I am well known for making bread and cake, those who visit will usually tell me that the treats I make are delectable, but this does not make me a professional baker. I am aware that Paul Greenwood has plead guilty to a crime, but I would ask that you would please carefully consider his character versus his mistake because although he made mistakes this doesn't make him a bad person.

My experience with Paul Greenwood as a boss, person, and friend, has contributed to me as a person.

Respectfully,

Marilene Pereira

Dear Judge Cedarbaum,

I understand that you will be sentencing Paul Greenwood, and I am aware that he has pleaded guilty to a crime.

Paul is like a father to me. I have known Paul for nearly 30 years. I met him in 1986 when I was 17. I was working as an apprentice horseback rider in a very difficult job. Paul was a client, and Paul was my very first student.

I worked with Paul several times a week for over a year, when he asked me how was holding up in my job. I think he had sensed how difficult it was there. [redacted]

I somehow knew that Paul was the right person to confide in. He was fatherly in his concern and he gave excellent advice as to how to go about getting out of my situation. He also had an open door at his stables and would provide me with a job as soon as I needed one. He also offered me a life changing proposal: if I worked for him, he wanted me to go to university and he would pay for all of my tuition.

I went to New York University for five years at night while working full time for Paul. He continued to be like a father to me. He read all of my papers; he gave me all kinds of advice about life, and was supportive of every venture I took on. I was not the only rider Paul tried to employ and educate. A colleague of mine, Scott Hofstetter, also went to school with me at first. Paul paid for his tuition as well.

Paul also helped my brother, John, who was mildly mentally handicapped. John was a victim of brain cancer, and has been deceased for more than a decade.

My brother John was never officially diagnosed as mentally handicapped; he was mainstreamed in high school, and graduated although he had a second grade level of reading and writing.

He served 8 years in the US army and upon return was making a living doing odd jobs such as plowing driveways, cutting grass, feeding horses and everything in between.

He had an extraordinary work ethic, but he was extremely exploitable due to his less than average IQ. An ex employer before the army was offering him a job that was going to exploit him at the same extent as before he went into service. His ex employer made him work 7 days a week for 12 hours most days. He was paid way below minimum wage.

Thanks to Paul, John worked 5 days a week, he had an excellent salary fit for his hard work, and he had healthcare. He had time to pursue his hobby, which was trail riding, and he also got married. John's life was cut too short by his cancer, and I remember Paul and his wife, Robin, at his funeral mourning him alongside my family.

Thanks to all of the opportunities Paul gave to me, and most importantly, an education, I have had a very successful career in the Equestrian world.

I still represent the United States in International competition and I have also been working in Dubai for the last nine years as the coach of the Dubai Equestrian Team. I am the only woman in the Middle East to hold such a position as trainer of a top level team consisting of five Arab men. Certainly without all of the experience Paul provided along with my education, I would never have been properly equipped to handle a job like this.

My husband, three children, and I owe a great deal to Paul for so many great things in our lives.

Respectfully,

Hon. Miriam Goldman Cedarbaum,

Dear Judge Cedarbaum:

About 30+ years ago, I met Paul Greenwood. He had just acquired Old Salem Farm from Paul Newman. A close friend, Marilyn Daley (now deceased) had started working at the farm's horse shows as an EMT (Emergency Medical Technician). I was going to substitute for her, as an EMT, at any shows she could not cover so stopped by to get acquainted. Paul requested that our North Salem Volunteer Ambulance Corps stand by at an upcoming show. Marilyn & I were both active members of the corps, a donation of $10,000 could be expected. With board of director approval we accepted. This started a good corps. feeling and support that lasted for many years. This also "cemented" a relationship with Paul, who always rooted for the NSVAC. Many years later, he helped, with a financial agreement to "back" the building of housing for our ambulance corps, as we did not have a permanent residence.

In 1989 my husband died unexpectedly at age 59. At this time I was covering all Old Salem Farm's horse shows plus other farm's shows. My job at a real estate office had eliminated my day job, as receptionist, at the same time. At my husband's wake, Paul came up to me with a hug and offered me employment in Old Salem Farm's office. (He had heard of my plight) His office manager would be in touch. She called the following week and I started doing bookwork for "Sweet Peet", a new company Paul was subsidizing. This job lasted for about 2 years, until the company was on it's feet.

During my tenure at Old Salem Farm, I saw the "human" side of this dynamo, Paul. He sponsored the farm's veterinarian and secretary to Stop Smoking classes. He brought in a piano so that the secretary, Joan,'s daughter could take lessons at the farm.

Another sharing with Paul was when he and his wife, Robin were in the process of adoption. One of my daughters is adopted so I could understand the procedure. I have two girls, the other was left to me in my sister's will. That we did not have in common!

Paul & I shared in the love and admiration of a mutual friend, Nancy Pierano. When she died, we shared our grief briefly during a horse show at Old Salem Farm. We both were wiping tears from our eyes and then Paul apologized for letting his guard down. I told him that he was just showing he was human. He had bought property from Nancy and built his home on a hill overlooking Titicus Reservoir in Purdys, NY. One day, again at a horse show, we were talking about Easter and he mentioned he would like to hold Easter Dawn Service in front of his home. We thought it would be a great idea to have a joint service with his church and Nancy's and my church. This started a short tradition between the two churches.

Paul & Robin became involved with Friends of Karen, a local group that lends all kinds of support to families with a seriously ill or injured child, often terminal. They were very generous contributors of both time and money and held atleast one fund raiser at Robin's new farm. This was the largest contribution to Friend of Karen at the time. In the early years of Friends of Karen, I was on the board of directors.

Well, I could probably go on and on in support of Paul Greenwood. I am fully aware that he pleaded guilty, but hope that I've shown that he's actually a decent human being.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Patricia T. Hitchcock

Dear Judge Cedarbaum:

My name is Valdir Pereira. I'm a ship feeter and I work in Rhode Island. I am pleased at the opportunity to write a letter on behalf of Paul Greenwood's character. I met Paul through my wife, who worked for him as a housekeeper.

I have knowledge of the situation that Paul was involved but my family and I can testify to the generosity and humble heart of Paul Greenwood. Paul is a good person and there are many examples; The situation that has stayed with me through many years was when I became laid off after a company shut down at the end of 2004.

My wife had mentioned to Paul that the company I worked at was no longer running and that they had finally sent the last of their employees home. Being as so that I was in that group of the last workers I no longer had a job.

Paul spoke to the Manager at the barn they owned, creating an opportunity for me to be there and work for a short period of time. During the time I was working at the barn the Manager and Paul took interest in my skills and situation, finding me a job that was in a company that created further connections for future jobs.

Being present at the barn and seeing Paul amongst those who worked for him I became more familiar with his character. I will never forget the surprise I felt the first time we had lunch of a Friday. Paul always purchased lunch for all his employees and the most amazing part was he sat with us. He pulled up a seat in back room and sat; Providing our last meal of the week. I remember he would later go around the room as we ate and socialized and asked everyone how they were as well as their families, remember their previous concerns and good news.

Seeing Paul do this touched my heart, and only heightened my sense of respect for him and showed me his true character.

Another distinct situation that can provide proof of the character and person of Paul Greenwood was when demonstration of the community in voting him into office as supervisor of the state of New York with an extensive amount of votes. Through the results of the election the community expressed his capability. His charisma, and his care for others in the community.

In dealing with Paul Greenwood I learned that a financial status, knowledge, and popularity did not make of him an arrogant person. But instead a loving and caring friend throughout an entire community.

Thank you, For all the consideration.

Very Truly Yours

Valdir Pereira

Dear Judge Cedarbaum:

My name is Scott Hofstetter, a horse equestrian trainer living in Ocala, Florida.
The first time I met Paul Greenwood twenty-five years ago, he owned Old Salem Farm in Old Salem, New York. As a young man from a small town in Florida, it was a great honor for him to acknowledge me as a hard-worker and he offered me an opportunity to begin my career as a professional horseman.

In the year of 1987, Paul offered me a job at his facility. In return for my commitment, he also provided me with the chance to finish my secondary education at Fairfield University in Connecticut. My family was not able to send me to school or give me the chance to pursue my desire to improve as a horseman. Without the financial support from Mr. Greenwood, I would not be able to provide help and support to other's as I am able to today.

Paul proved himself to be a kind, caring man. He did a lot for the horse industry—purchasing a farm like "Old Salem" provided many horse-equestrians a place to go and show their horses, and a place to set up their own businesses. It was a place that held some of the top horses and instructors in the country. His leadership and interest in promoting the sport, especially in the northeast, spread high standards for many people to try and aspire. He always showed genuine interest for the welfare of the people and the animals close to him.

As you consider Paul's future, please remember I will always be grateful for the belief and support Paul gave me.

Sincerely,

M. S. Hofstetter

Dear Judge Cedarbaum:

My name is Jessica Perry. I am writing you this letter to hopefully provide some perspective on the character of Paul Greenwood as it relates to the interactions that I've had with him. As a brief introduction, I currently live with my five children and husband in Iowa where he is finishing a medical residency. I am a stay-at-home mother and homeschool teacher to our children.

I am from Brewster, New York and first met Paul during high school when I began helping take care of his daughter [redacted], who was adopted as an infant. Over the course of the next several years until I graduated from high school, and then during college breaks, I regularly watched [redacted] and her younger sister [redacted]. I still have memories of the obvious love and care that he had for his children. As someone who did a fairly extensive amount of babysitting even prior to this, I was appreciative of the kindness and respect that Paul showed to me and the genuine attention he paid to his daughters.

Paul knew of my desire to attend college after high school. He attended my graduation ceremony and became aware that I had not been awarded as much scholarship assistance as I had anticipated. Without any request on my part, he generously provided additional money of his own that allowed all of my undergraduate tuition and living expenses for the first two years of college to be paid for while I attended Brigham Young University. Without this assistance, I am unsure how I would have been able to receive the education that I did.

Additionally, when my husband and I were married, we were still both undergraduate students. We were both full-time students, and were working to support ourselves. Money was certainly tight as it is for many young couples starting out their lives together. Paul once again made a tremendously kind offer, and provided sufficient funds to help pay for my college tuition that year.

I understand that Paul has pleaded guilty to his charges. It is my hope; however, that these few examples I have provided, can give some additional insight about his kindness and generous nature.

Sincerely,

Jessica Perry

Dear Judge Cedarbaum,

My name is Siobhan Latchford, and I have worked for Robin Greenwood since 1987, apart from 6 years during which I had an office job. I left my office job to come back to work for Robin when she started her pony farm in 2002, and have worked for her ever since. I have also known Paul Greenwood for most of this time, he was seeing Robin when I first started to work for her, I attended their wedding in 1991 and I am Godmother to their second child [redacted] Greenwood.

Paul has always been a caring helpful person, and I saw many instances over the years where he helped and supported people who were in need, or deserving of a hand. For example, when I first started with Robin in 1987, Paul was putting two young employees through college, Alice Debany and Scott Hofstetter. They were talented riders who were just out of the junior ranks, and Paul wanted to make sure they also got an education while working for him in the horse business. He has helped employees put their kids through college, whether by loans or donations I'm not sure, but he made sure it happened. Both he and Robin supported me in my application for a green card and permanent resident status at this time too and were instrumental in making this happen with sponsorship and guarantee of a job.

For me personally I had more interaction with Paul after he and Robin acquired the farm Grand Central on Dingle Ridge Road and I went back to work for Robin as manager of the ponies and all that that involves. Paul was always very caring and concerned about the employees and their well being and if anyone had a problem or needed something he was right there to help and support. [redacted] and Paul immediately told me not to worry about a thing, that they would be there for me and I only had to ask for anything I needed. I was fortunate in that I had a good outcome and was able to continue working most of the time, but I think knowing how supportive Paul and Robin were was a big factor in keeping my recovery stress free.
Had things never changed for us, I would go on thinking Paul was a great guy, always willing to help anyone and always ready to listen to a problem. But I would not have known the true depth of his character which became apparent to me after the collapse of his firm in early 2009. We had over 80 ponies on the farm at the time, and about 10 employees, some seasonal and some full time. When it became apparent that there was no future for the farm, much of the help left and found other jobs and we were left with a lot of work and hardly anyone to do it. Paul called me and said "I want to come and help you". I said "help me do what?" and he said "help you do all the work that needs to be done on the farm". He showed up the next morning and over the next few months he came every day that he could and scrubbed water troughs, mucked out run-in sheds and distributed hay to ponies. He mowed fields for hours on end, he even took a turn at weed whacking which as anyone who has tried it can tell you is very tough on the arms and everywhere else too. He did his utmost to help us out with work that he really had no experience with and he succeeded. He lightened the load, and at the same time earned a new level of respect from those few of us left there. I know he felt bad about the farm and our situation but I can't think of another person who in his position, would have rolled up his sleeves and humbled himself to do the most menial tasks on the farm alongside the rest of us. He has always been a decent and good man but this impressed me more than anything else he has done over the years and he has done so much. He is a caring contributing member of society and when he lost the means to help and serve in the ways he was used to, he found other ways.

I still work for Robin at her much smaller farm in Southern Pines NC and Paul still tries to help out wherever he can on the farm. He also teaches on a volunteer basis. I've heard him talk about the people he teaches and how he coaches them towards goals they have, like passing an exam to be accepted by the military, or learning enough English to take tests to become a pharmacist. He genuinely cares and has made life better for so many people. I've know him for 27 years now, and in spite of what has happened to him, and in spite of his guilty plea, I know he's an honest man who never intended to do harm to anyone.

Yours sincerely,

Siobhan Latchford

Dear Judge Cedarbaum:

I write to you on behalf of Paul Greenwood, who has been been my employer, mentor and a champion for my family's success. I met Mr. Greenwood in 1993 since he owned the farm where I have been employed for 21 year at the time. Mr. Greenwood provided free housing for some of his employees and always treated me and my colleagues with respect and kindness.

In 1995 I made the decision to move my family to the United States from Venezuela in search of a better future for my two young daughters, who were then eight and eleven years old. When I approached Mr. Greenwood about my decision and discussed the possibility of moving my wife and daughters into the barn's house, he was completely supportive and provided a room for my daughters as well to help us settle into a new life. We lived in the house for four years, which allowed my wife and I save money for a down payment on a house of our own. My wife enjoys sewing and I will never forget the time when she tried to help him pay for the additional energy costs, Mr. Greenwood insisted that we save that money for our house.

Prior to my family's arrival Mr. Greenwood helped me understand the country's education system and assisted me with my daughters' elementary school matriculation. Even years after selling the barn, Mr. Greenwood continued to help me and my daughters. When my eldest daughter's college scholarship was retracted during her freshman year due to a delay in our residency process, Mr. Greenwood donated $6,000 for her education.

Mr Greenwood was always supportive and happy for our achievements but I am most grateful for his decision to sponsor me for my legal residency. His decision helped shape my daughters' futures and opened doors for the opportunities my wife and I sought and worked hard to ensure for them.

While I understand Mr. Greenwood pleaded guilty to a crime, he has been a positive influence in our lives and the community around me. My family and I will forever be grateful for his generosity, kindness, financial support and guidance. His positive attitude and encouragement helped my family succeed and live happy lives; we will always be indebted to his benevolence.

Thank you for your consideration.

Dear Judge Cedarbaum:

I am writing on behalf of Mr. Paul Greenwood, who has been a benefactor to my family. I currently reside in New York, New York, where I also work as a business development executive for a financial news company. I have known Mr. Greenwood since 1995, and my family and I owe much of our success in the United States to his kindness and generosity.

I met Mr. Greenwood in 1995 after my mother, sister and I emigrated from Venezuela. He provided free housing for our family for four years in order to help my parents save enough money for a down payment on a home of our own. During this time, Mr. Greenwood agreed to sponsor my father to become a resident alien, thus helping our family attain legal status.

Years later Mr. Greenwood continued to support and provide guidance for my family, even though my father was no longer his employee. Mr. Greenwood loaned my parents $6,000 towards my college education when we experienced an unforeseen delay in our legalization process, which disrupted my full scholarship to Fordham University. When my father and I attempted to repay the loan, Mr. Greenwood refused to accept the money, insisting it was more important that I invest it in my future education.

I understand Mr. Greenwood has plead guilty to participating in a crime; however, I have never known Mr. Greenwood to be anything other than a kind and generous person. I have the utmost respect for him and I am grateful for his support both material and otherwise. Without Mr. Greenwood's assistance I may not have enjoyed the freedom and success I have experienced as a proud graduate of Fordham University and a United States citizen.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Respectfully,

Karina Bustamante
